

ABLEISM IS A PROBLEM!

We live in a world where ableism is a problem: where it isn't talked about enough: where nobody cares how it feels: isn't it time we talked to children about how it feels?

If we don't talk about it nothing will be done. Only 5% of people treat us the same as everyone else. They treat us like little kids or just ignore us. I love it when people that are younger than me treat me like I'm younger than them!!! It makes me so annoyed. Why do you only see the wheelchair? What are you so scared about? Why don't you see the person? We're people who have feelings just like YOU!!!

Someone in my tutor talked to my friend instead of me asking questions about me. How would you feel?

You don't like people that are different than you, do you? Some people might say you have to treat us differently sometimes or 'I'm too scared. 'I think if you talked to us normally we could understand you and you could understand us.

Don't judge us by our disabilities that's my advice. You wouldn't like to be treated differently for something you couldn't control. You could learn another way of life from a different set of eyes.

Why do we need to educate people because it is just common sense? Let's live in a world where disabled people aren't scary!
